

Headsweats Hat Company Announces Custom Line of Hats for Dads

Hat company Headsweats is offering seven new customizable hats made just for dads in time for Father's Day. The company is well known for their sweat-combating headwear, and these seven styles are in addition to the other 140 popular colors and styles available on their website.

Headsweats has announced that they are adding a "Just For Dads" collection to their popular headwear line. The seven hats in the collection will be an additional to the over 140 styles and colors already available on their website. Each hat can be customized with logo and color choices that are perfect for dads.

"After the success of our Mother's Day line, we wanted to do something special for dads," said company founder Alan Romick. "We created a great selection of hats for dads, no matter if their sport is running, tennis, fishing, or working on the car."

The new "Just for Dads" line includes a go hat, trucker hat, race hats, and three different sun visors. The company is offering five different logos to choose from, available on each hat style. Customers will be able to customize the hat of their choice when they place an order.

Each hat is made with the same great materials used in other Headsweats hats, as well as the sweat-combating technology that made the Headsweats products popular with the sporting community.

All hats on the website including the "Just for Dads" collection are eligible for the company's $5 flat rate shipping, or free shipping on all orders over $50. Those interesting in purchasing a Headsweats hat for their dad should place their orders soon for Father's Day at www.headsweats.com.

About Headsweats

Headsweats was founded in 1998 after avid cyclist Alan Romick got frustrated with the perils of heavy sweat blindness. He set out to develop headgear that would meet his needs while riding, and with feedback from the cycling community, he developed his first hat and released it in four colors. The hat was a success with athletes around the world, and today the company has over a dozen different products in 140 different colors and styles. Check them all out at www.headsweats.com.
